May the Joy and Peace of the Christmas season be in all our

Please, be considerate of our neighbours.

Parents parking in Durham Close are making life very difficult for residents. Last week a car was left parked across two garages which meant one of the residents could not get her car out, and often there are cars parked on pavements which means that emergency services would be unable to get through to the sheltered accommodation if they were needed. It may only be for "a few minutes" but it isn't fair on those who live here.

On Monday Kaidn is having his head shaved in aid of cancer charities. Please sponsor him. Donations may be left at the school office or sent in with children.

The best of this week's Blogs...

Max Williams left us two weeks ago to go to a new school in Maidenhead. So we were pleased and surprised to see he is still blogging for Christ the King

Hi to everyone who is reading my blog I'm not even sure if I'm still allowed to use it seeing that I'm not a member of Christ the King, but today I'm blogging about my first week in my new school, Redroofs Theatre School for the performing arts.

My first week of Redroofs was amazing. I don't even know where to start. It was really scary for the first lesson of my new school because I had just started and I knew no one and did I mention that I'm the only boy in year six, YIKESSS? My first lesson at Redroofs was Maths and believe it or not it was quite fun because all we did was just play maths games for 40 minutes. (Did I say that all lessons were 40 minutes long?) It was so much fun. After maths we had ICT which was so cool because basically all we did was play scratch and after that it was science and our science teacher is also Australian (I think that Miss Hysen would get on with her) so it was really fun. And little did you know it, it was break time but you can't go out at break time because the garden is too small. Inside you can play on computers and do whatever. After break I had drama which was so funny because we had to make up a drama scene and my one was where me and my friends went to town and I got mugged so we chased the thief and caught him. After drama it was lunch and at break and lunch times you're allowed to use your phones which is AWESOME. I had met a boy called Maddison who's in year 7 and he asked do we want to be friends so I said yes because I didn't know anyone at the school. During class we took a selfie using my phone and people who have Instagram might have seen it. When lunch

Please remember -

Parents sometimes very generously send in treats for birthdays and other special occasions. With children in school who can suffer severe allergic reactions we have to be extremely careful and it may be, therefore, that at times we will have to ask children (and staff) to wait until they are at home before they consume their treats.

- no nuts in school!

had finished it was time for English which is boring as usual but after that was done I went and did computers again for about 2 hours and then it was time for home. School finishes at 3pm and for Christmas and summer half term we get 2 more weeks than any other public schools so my first day was pretty good.....

I hope everybody at Christ The King is getting on alright and everyone have a happy Christmas and a good start to 2016.

Elsewhere on the blogs,

- Miss Casey's blog has a video of Irene telling her own version of the Three Little Pigs;
- Mrs Cox's class has some fantastic blogs, including 6 consecutive entries from Eulyn and a great song to help you learn your times' tables;
- Anya Welsh has written a fabulous story in Mr Krasnopski's class;
- Nursery have some fun learning about Advent.
