My Hero

Umar Khan (right) and Mishma Anjum were chosen to represent our school in the first ever local schools' public speaking contest. The topic of their talks was "My Hero". Mishma chose to focus on Rosa Parkes, and Umar talked about Imran Khan, the famous cricketer who is now a successful politician. The contest was judged by Sarah Hacker, the Mayor of Reading, Martin Salter, former MP for Reading West and Dr Steve Musson from the University of Reading.

Anna Jakubowska from Year 2 came along to the event to help with the judging.

A great evening was had by all.

Thank you to the parents of Reception and Year 2 children who came along on Wednesday to support the Joggy Bear Club. This initiative is being trialled at Christ the King. It helps children to learn through helping them to be more active.

The best of this week's Blogs...

This week, there are some brilliant blogs from right across the school, but one that stands out is this story written by Angel in Year 4:

Once upon a time, there lived a young lady called Angelica. Angelica had four problems. She was hungry and poor and as if that wasn't bad enough she was homeless. In addition, she had a child who was extremely ill.

She thought of going to NHS Hospital because her child was desperately in need.

She was just about to open the door when a flash of yellow caught her eye. Angelica was peering through a room where she found an angel. She was stroking her torn, broken dress gently. "What's happened?" asked Angelica. "I've caught my dress on a nail on a hospital bed and now I think it's broken," she exclaimed. "If you will help me I'll grant you one magic wish."

So her four problems were she was homeless, she was hungry, she had a child who was extremely ill and she was poor. What could she do? She thought, Money! But the Angel said, "Money doesn't solve your child's illness."

Angelica thought very hard for a moment, then she demanded she and her family eating happily and healthily in the dining room while having lots of money in their new cosy mansion.

Of course they don't need a mansion so they sold it. For the money they got they got even more money for many decades.
